DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Peacher House is a two story stone house dating from the late 18th or early 19th century with a frame 1970 addition located on the south side of Lochary Road south of Palmer State Park near the village of Kalmia in Harford County, Maryland. The original section of the house faces northeast.

The stone section is uncoursed rubble and has three bays on the northeast or main elevation. The central entry and the window openings have flat brick arches. The windows are eight over eight in this section and are apparently recent replacements. Interior end chimneys rise from both ends of the stone section.

The modern frame addition is slightly larger than the stone section and extends around the west gable end and south elevations. It has tongue-in-groove horizontal siding and a bay window on the south elevation. A wood date plaque at the northwest corner of the frame addition reads "1884" but, according to the owner, the actual date of the house is about 1773. A wood deck is attached to the rear of the frame section and a swimming pool is located immediately south of the house.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Peacher house was possibly built by a Black stonemason named Rumsey about 1773, according to Mrs. Annie Presbury, a long-time resident of the Kalmia area. Mrs. Presbury also said the same stonemason may have been responsible for six such stone houses in various locations in the county. One such house may be the E.F. Bussey House (HA-978). (Mrs. Presbury was unavailable for clarification, being confined to a nursing home. The above information was repeated by Mrs. Peacher.)
